

INTERNSHIP OPPORTUNITY

Student Housing & Higher Education Research Intern

What we need: Research, Organise, Report

For the leading think tank and platform in student housing and higher education in Europe, we are looking for a research intern to help us stay up to date on developments in student housing and higher education in Europe. Your research helps identify trends in the market, and keeps us on top of what is going on in the world of student housing. You will be responsible for tracking news about student housing in Europe, filing this news in our database, and expanding our network of higher education and student housing connections. You will be a sparring partner for our research and foundation manager. The job reports to the Foundation manager, who will be your day-to-day contact. The job is based in Amsterdam, and will be fully in English.

What we ask

- Intern on BA or MA level;
- Background in Real Estate, Urban Planning, International Economics, Higher Education Studies or related fields;
- Understanding of and/or affinity with the real estate market and developments in the world of higher education;
- Affinity with and knowledge of data organisation;
- Fluent in English, both spoken and written;
- Knowledge of another European language would be an advantage.

What we offer

- A fulltime intern position in a small team (6 people) in a lively office in Amsterdam;
- Six-month position from January – June 2017;
- We are able to support an academic research project (thesis) on the student housing or international higher education market;
- Monthly compensation.

About us

The Class of 2020 is a non-profit partner based foundation for student housing, higher education and city development on a European scale. We are a think-tank, network and platform aimed at:

- Creating transparency for the European student housing market;
- Providing and sharing knowledge between our partners;
- Connecting parties that can benefit from each other: investors, developers, operators, cities, universities, service providers, etc.

Each year we publish an annual trends report and organise the largest student housing conference in continental Europe. For more information:
